Notes and Guidance

- This meeting has been organized by ‘Oxford in Berlin’ in support of the goals of the Oxford-Berlin Research Partnership which covers the very broad research interests of the partner universities. In terms of public and global health activities, ‘Oxford in Berlin’ has increasingly adopted an open, welcoming, relationship with participants from institutions beyond those of the Oxford-Berlin Partnership in the spirit of creating a truly borderless, outward-looking, community of researchers and practitioners.
- The purpose of these meetings is not to run or manage new projects, but to enable participants to strengthen already existing collaborations and to form new collaborations in high-priority areas. A selection of joint Oxford-Berlin activities came out of the last, ‘Data in Health’, workshop, some of them now seed-funded. The hope is for a similar number of new Oxford-Berlin-LSHTM activities on priority themes to come out of this meeting, to flourish in whatever institutional settings best suit their needs.
- Attendees to this meeting are mostly (though not entirely) from Oxford, LSHTM, and Berlin/Potsdam institutes, but this composition is not the long-term intention. Once we have a clearer sense of direction and funding, researchers from around the world, with a particular focus on the global south, will play a significant role in activities.
- In the hope of giving individuals more time to contribute in discussion and to aid group dynamics, the compromise was made to not hold this as a public meeting. Participants are asked to, as far as practically possible, stay for the whole day in the hope of encouraging cross-cutting discussion that breaks across expertise boundaries.
- All attendees are asked to send a brief bio beforehand including a few key links to their work relevant to the themes of the workshop. Bios and links will be gathered in one file and shared before the meeting.
- Speakers are asked to present for a maximum of 6 minutes, to leave time for discussion. The point of presentations is to identify gaps, share areas of potential future work together, and help to define a collective vision, and less about giving details of methodology. The informal conversations in the breaks and during the social parts of the day are as important as presentations and discussion, particularly for forging new bonds that will lead to future collaborative work.
- The principle role of the moderators is to keep the flow of discussion going, to identify and record actionable points for the future, and to keep to timings. Moderators can, if they so wish, spend a minute or two first describing how their activities, and those of their institutions, relate to the themes of the day.
- We intend for the results of this workshop to contribute to the success of the 25th October meeting of the German Federal Foreign Office in partnership with the Wildlife Conservation Society (WCS) “One Planet, One Health, One Future” at the German Federal Foreign Office in Berlin, and to link to two meetings in the spring of 2020 in The Gambia (LSHTM) and Uganda (WHS Regional meeting with a panel titled “One Health: Shaping the Blueprint for a Truly Holistic Approach to Health”). There is a great opportunity across this set of meetings for joined-up thinking, goal setting, and vision-crafting over many critical areas.

Not present in the meeting but kept informed of developments

These events are designed to stimulate the strengthening of networks of researchers working in common areas of enquiry, working outwards from the initial partner organizations to eventually foster a strong international partnership. Not all those interested in attending are able to make the date of a meeting, many ask to be kept informed of developments, others we feel it useful to keep in the loop (and, to increase the numbers involved, sometimes new attendees take precedent over those who took part in a previous meeting). In this initial phase, those taking part on the day are urged to keep the names and interests of these other interested parties in their future discussions, project developments, and meetings.
